Showcase Your Company at the Annual Convergence of Industry Leaders in Commercial Cryptography

Almost 500 commercial cryptography professionals from 27 countries came together virtually last year for the International Cryptographic Module Conference—the industry’s leading forum for data security based in commercial encryption. For 2021, we’re returning to a live/hybrid format, presenting up-to-the-minute sessions and content and continuing our in-depth coverage of cryptographic policies, standards, technologies, implementation, and markets. Reserve your place now at this gathering of professionals who develop, test, certify, specify, procure, and rely on these technologies.

Nine Tracks Cover the Industry

The conference at ICMC includes over 90 presentations in nine tracks:

General Technology:
Tools and techniques relating to cryptographic modules

Advanced Technology:
High-level technology issues, or special-focus subject matter

Certification Programs:
Issues related to the CMVP, government programs and global certification

End-User Experience:
CM products, certifications, and vulnerabilities for organizations that rely on crypto security

Open-Source Cryptography:
Efforts to audit, improve and certify the security of OS crypto projects

Industry Vertical/Embedded Crypto: The application of embedded encryption in specific industry verticals

Quantum-Ready Crypto:
The quantum computing threat and efforts to transition to quantum-safe algorithms

Random Bit Generators:
Issues related to the design and validation of entropy sources and random bit generators

PCI
Updates on Payment Card Industry SW and HW crypto security standards including PCI-PTS, PCI-SpOC

The coming year will see widespread changes in commercial cryptography: The highly-anticipated FIPS 140-3 standard for cryptographic modules will soon be the only acceptable standard. At the same time, European regulators are moving forward with independent cryptographic standards. Interest in open source solutions has greatly expanded. And legacy systems are under a growing threat as the need for quantum-resistant algorithms increases each year. In the face of these and other changes, hundreds of cryptographic professionals will reconvene in Washington DC for ICMC20. The conference will survey the new FIPS 140-3 standard, discuss the effect on current certifications, and report on the progress of the Automated Cryptographic Validation Program. Three days of presentations will survey the open source cryptographic protocols that power the Internet and the cutting-edge post-quantum crypto work that will insure future security. At ICMC21 over 500 industry leaders from 27 countries will come together to address the unique challenges faced by those who develop, produce, test, specify, and use cryptographic modules, with a strong focus on standards such as FIPS 140-3, ISO/IEC 19790, eEIDAS, and Common Criteria. ICMC reviews technical issues underlying cryptographic implementation including physical security, key management, side-channel analysis, open-source development, algorithm testing, quantum threats, embedded applications, standardization, validation programs, government policy, professional ethics, and more..

A Unique Promotion Opportunity

Promotion opportunities are available for leading companies offering products, technologies and services in this evolving field. It’s a unique opportunity to showcase your company to an engaged and highly responsive audience. The event features an efficient three-day participation format that respects your busy schedule.
